

SCONE EQUINE HOSPITAL

Dedicated expert care.

Position available: Equine Medicine and Neonatology, Scone Equine Hospital, Australia

We have a seasonal position available for an equine medicine specialist (DipECEIM, DipACVIM or Australian Fellow) in our ICU starting August 2026. We are particularly looking for someone with skills in critical care and neonatology. The position will be primarily hospital based with occasional visits to local stud farms to provide second opinion consultations. The successful applicant will work alongside three other equine medicine specialists to provide a high level of veterinary care to critically ill neonatal foals, adult horses, and post-operative patients. We admit approximately 800-1000 cases to the ICU per year, of which more than 150 are critically ill neonatal foals. The on-call roster is currently a 1 in 4 for weeknights and weekends.

Scone Equine Hospital is the largest equine veterinary practice in Australia, employing approximately 40 equine veterinarians during the breeding season. We have support from five specialists in equine surgery, one specialist in theriogenology, associate veterinarians, a medicine fellow, interns, and a large team of experienced equine nurses. Available equipment includes a neonatal ventilator, nasal high flow, a 3m video-gastroscope, video-endoscopy, dynamic endoscopy, diode laser, three ultrasound machines with Doppler, telemetric ECG, slit lamp, tonometer, digital radiography, CT, and full diagnostic laboratory. Additional information about our hospital is available on our website
